Heart of One Hundred and Two Diamonds, Six Three-Karat Stones and Other Jewelry Carried Away -No Clue.

Diamonds, jewelry, cash and other valuables to the amount of $10,000 were stolen last evening from the home of Emanuel Jacobus, of No. 1325 Madison avenue, and the entire detective force of this city is to-day hustling fever ishly about in seach of the thieves.

Capt. Titus has taken personal charge of the case. He is convinced that the Public Is Being Squeezed While thieves are experts in their line and he not only wants to get them for this crime but to keep them out of other people's houses. He won't be happy until he gets them.

Mr. Jacobus is a lawyer at No. 132 Nassau street. He lives with his wife, FAMINE PURELY A his wife's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. George Schofield and two servants in a three-story house which is one of a solid row of private dwellings between come down to a fight between the operain Madison avenue.

A "Second-Story" Robbery

Next door to his house on the south there is an unoccupied dwelling to which a rear addition is being built. This is two rories and from its roof it is easy to get into the window of the third floor rear. In view of what happened last ight this is an important fact.

The Jacobuses dressed to go out last night, and had their dinner a little er than usual. They sat down at the about 6.30 o'clock, and afterward le saw nothing wrong, but it is certain family was at dinner.

Investigation showed that the thieves had got into the house by means of the addition to the adjoning house. Mr. Jacobus's bedroom window was open and there were marks of lime on the sill and on the floor just beneath it. This daily consumption. indicated that the thieves had picked up on their shoes some of the plaster

The drawer had been opened with a jimmy. There had been no wasted energy on the job. Things hadn't been thrown about. No time had been lost. It had been a most orderly and neat piece of work, from a professional point of view.

The house next door is owned by J. Coleman Smith. He has not been occu-pying it since the alterations have been in progress. A trusted negro servant has slept there. Last night Mr. Smith needed the negro for other work, and he notified Haight & Hutchings, the contractors, that they must send a man to take the servant's place. They failed

Mr. Jacobus suspects that some of the workmen who have been employed on the extension either committed the robbery or gave information to professional thieves. The fact that a night was taken when there was no one in the Smith house, that the only rooms entered were those which could be seen into by those at work on the addition; that entrance was gained at such an hour by means of the roof, where there was a ladder standing ready, looks to ceedingly suspicious.

Does Hard Coal Favor soft.

This is the view taken by a number of the hard coal operators, and in itself it is an argument in their favor, for they are arguing in favor of the use of a commodity which they do not sell. If they were trying, it is pointed out, to raise the prices of hard coal, they could do it in no better way than by discouraging entirely the use of soft coal in this city.
